1. The Biggest Little Farm

Date: 2019
Country: USA
Genres: documentary
Themes: agriculture, ecology, nature

John Chester and his wife Molly leave Los Angeles to start a farm in the California hills. In order for their dream of owning their own biodynamic farming to become a reality, they must overcome a series of adversities, such as making large areas of depleted soil fertile and controlling pests without the use of toxins. The documentary follows them for eight years on their path to success, which was accompanied by many setbacks.

1. The Biggest Little Farm

2. Minari

Date: 2020
Country: USA
Genres: drama
Themes: migration, family, home

Winner of numerous international awards, MINARI is a moving, gentle and at the same time cheerful drama about a Korean-American family that moves from California to Arkansas and tries to make a new start. Director and screenwriter Lee Isaac Chung tells a very personal story shaped by his own experiences about family, home, identity and the American Dream.

Date: 2017
Country: USA
Genres: drama
Themes: bullying, family, friendship, school, childhood

10-year-old Auggie Pullmann suffers from a rare genetic defect that has left his face disfigured since birth. Until now, his mother taught him at home - now the boy goes to a public school and becomes the laughing stock of the other children. From the novel published in 2012 by author R.J. Palacio, director and co-author Steve Chbosky stages a highly emotional, multi-perspective drama with an excellent ensemble

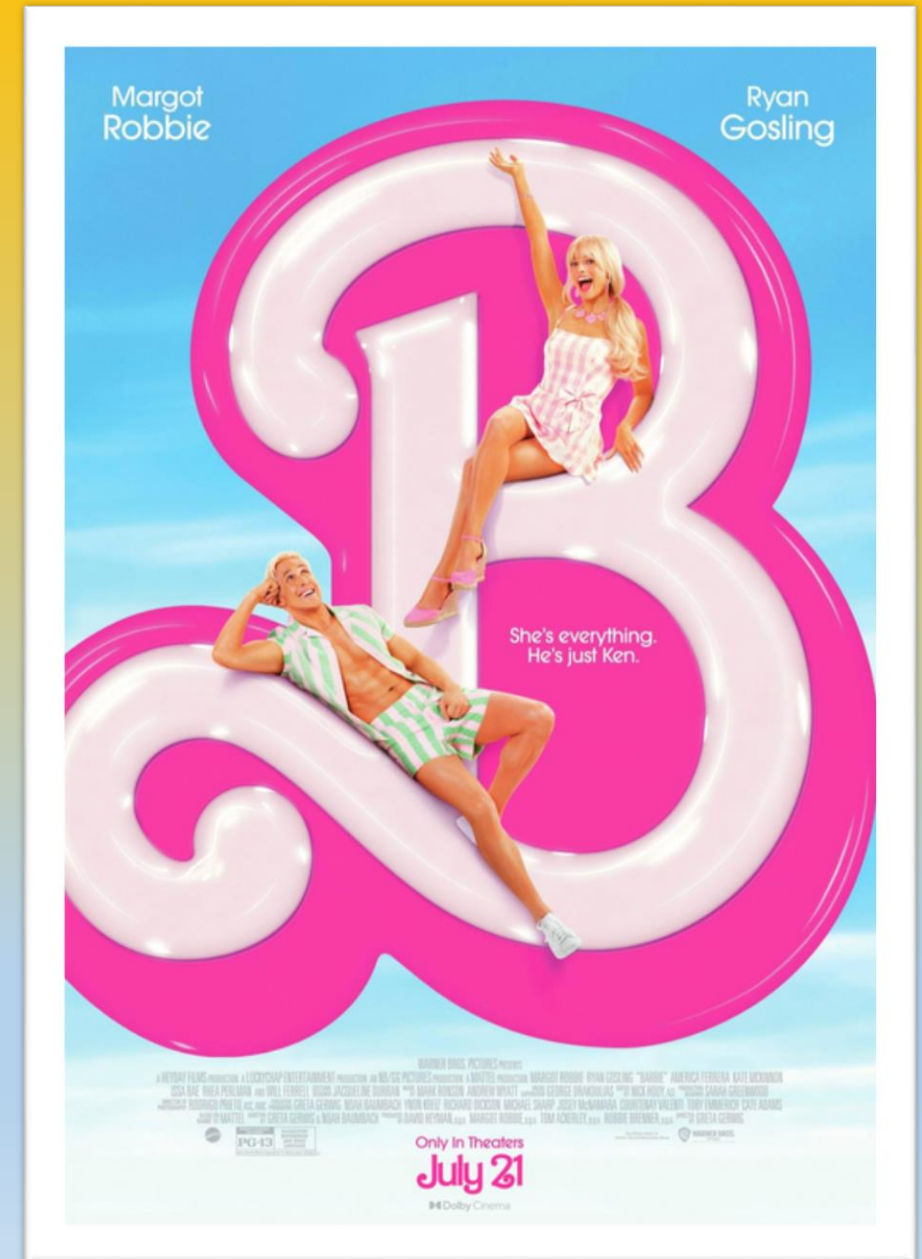

3. Wonder

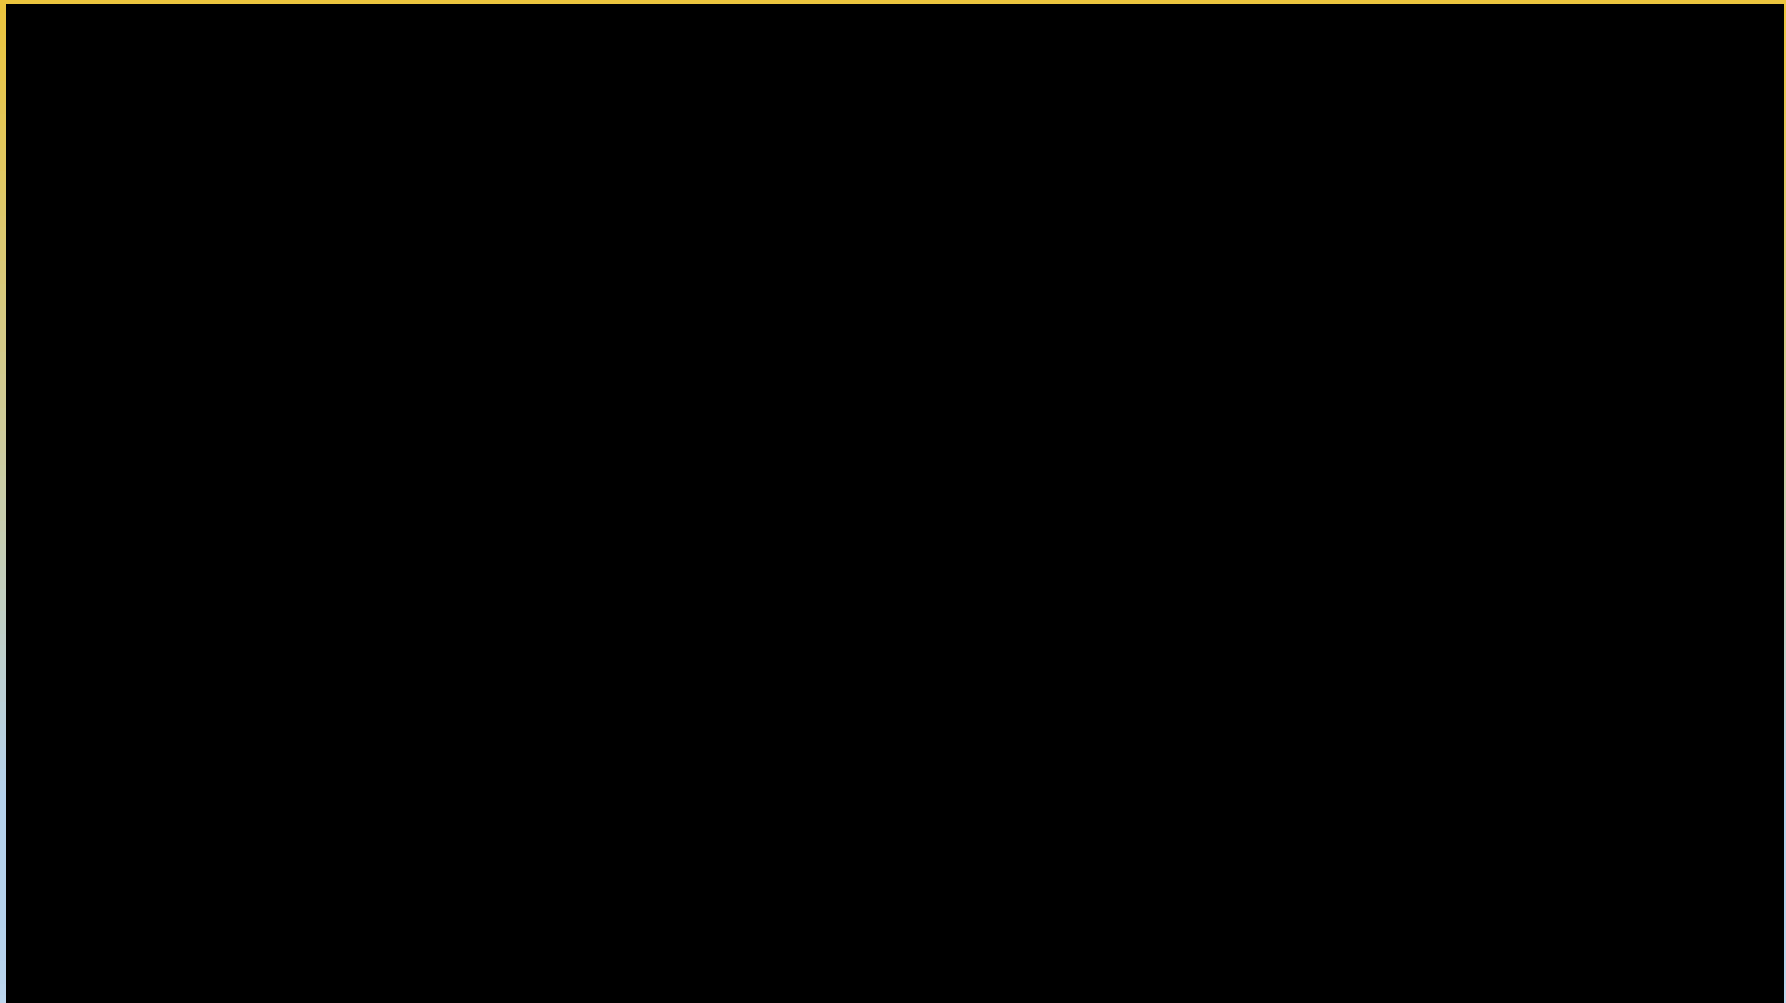

4. Barbie

Date: 2023
Country: USA
Genres: comedy, fantasy
Themes: adventure, emancipation, gender/gender roles

In Barbieland, every day is the best ever. Like all other Barbies, Barbie is completely perfect and always happy. But why does she suddenly have to think about death in the middle of her dream villa dance party? Why does the invisible water run ice-cold out of her plastic shower the next morning and why do her feet, which are perfectly arched for high heels, suddenly become so disgustingly flat and - human? To fix these glitches, Barbie must travel to the real world - to Los Angeles, California. But the adventure goes completely differently than planned.
